Customer Needs

In today's environment, where sieges and lockdowns are becoming more commonplace, Heritage Baptist school, like so many other schools and day care facilities, need to provide security for the children entrusted to their care, as well as their staff members. Many of these facilities are housed in multiple buildings, which are often widely dispersed, very much like a college campus.

Violent episodes in schools have led educators and legislators to make school safety a priority. Like many issues in education, suggestions on how to make a school safe have proceeded simultaneously on many different tracks. One of the most recommended methods involves protection of students through video cameras.

Cameras are placed in areas where they can monitor activity as it takes place. Heritage Baptist needed to have surveillance of individual buildings, classrooms, and surrounding common areas. They also required monitoring of all their facilities from a single location, whether from the local monitoring station, or remotely from the Director's home day or night.

Benefits:

- Peace of mind for students and staff
- Increased sense of security for students and parents in response to recent highly publicized incidents of violence in the schools
- Reduction in property damages such as vandalism and theft
- Cameras provide security in hidden areas of schools that are physically difficult to monitor.
- The documentation that video recording provides can be invaluable in situations involving liability claims
- Cameras allow school security personnel to do more job specific work, which saves money in the long run
- Curbs crime and provides physical evidence when crimes occur
- Prevents gang activity, fights, and trespassing
- Provides school officials with information and evidence that is not otherwise available
